"From the opera's fragile prelude to the Champagne brilliance of the soiree that first fills the stage to the last strains that accompany Violetta's death, Verdi's dramatic tapestry flowed from the Lyric Opera Orchestra. Christie led with a consummate sense of both the opera's instrumental voice and its interplay with the characters before him. [La traviata]" – Chicago on the Aisle

"Wei Wu sings well as Jobs's Buddhist mentor Köbun, whose wisecracks undermine his supposed function, Jessica E. Jones sings exquisitely as the mother of Jobs's child, and Michael Christie presides over an expertly executed performance. Santa Fe Opera has a hit on its hands." – Financial Times

"Michael Christie, Minnesota Opera's music director and chief conductor, presided in the pit last Saturday night, giving careful guidance to the pulsating yet delicate electro-acoustic score by 40-year-old Mason Bates, recently named the most-performed composer of his generation." – Minnesota Post

"Michael Christie conducted with precision and pizzazz, and a couple of orchestral interludes truly got the adrenaline pumping. One of them, at about the opera's one-hour mark, accompanies projected images charting the meteoric rise of the company and its growing complication as a corporate organism. I wouldn't be surprised if it were extracted to stand as a frenetic orchestral showpiece in its own right." – Santa Fe New Mexican

"Yet the highest praise should be reserved for those given the tallest task: conductor Michael Christie and the orchestra. From the hypnotic, slow-building opening to the final triumphal entry into Valhalla, they offer non-stop transportation to a magical world." – Pioneer Press
